Re: HA17.318573, Slane Bypass

A chara,

In 2012, An Bord Pleanála refused permission for a bypass of Slane on the basis that an alternative option was available. The only suitable alternative option today is the same as it was then – to ban five-axle vehicles from the medieval village of Slane.

A senior engineer with Meath County Council said at the time that such a ban would see 800 heavy goods vehicles move to other roads, thereby alleviating traffic and safety concerns associated with their use of Slane village as a way to avoid tolls. That figure is over 10 years old - how many HGV's would be rerouted today if the ban was implemented, and is this not worth considering in the public interest?

It is proposed to trench a highway across the Boyne Valley and build a bridge 1.6 km west of Knowth when the M1 is only 6 miles to the east, and at least 800 vehicles could use this alternative. That's 11 minutes to reach a motorway with a 120km speed limit, ITS (intelligent transportation system) journey information, service and stop areas, and connectivity north and south.

It is difficult to overstate the transformative effect of removing HGV's from Slane, in terms of relief to the traffic congestion, improved safety, improved air quality, not to mention the visual amenity of the village and that sense of reclaiming the road for residents and local businesses.

From the National Planning Framework: Project Ireland 2040, objective 17 is to "Enhance, integrate and protect the special physical, social, economic and cultural value of built heritage assets through appropriate and sensitive use now and for future generations."

It defies all logic that a HGV ban has not already been implemented. Will ABP please consider the interests and wellbeing of the people of Slane, which is being abused by hauliers as a rat run for cost-saving purposes at the expense of the public.

I observe that Meath County Council have failed to do the obvious – implement a HGV ban to remedy the situation where the historic Slane village continues to take the fall for cost pressures experienced by the haulage industry.

Is mise le meas,

Treasa Keegan
